So, to further celebrate the works of powerful women artists, we at The Sydney Feminists have decided to shift the focus onto some of Australia's finest female artists. Inspired by Zing Tsjeng's 'Forgotten Women: The Artists' (2018), we've developed a thorough and comprehensive guide honouring some of the great Australian female ...

Forgotten Femmes - The Great Women in Australian Art

The great women artists that history forgot. A rare example of a successful female artist in the 17th Century, Peeters was an innovator in both form and content. At a time when women were denied access to formal training, and their subject matter was restricted, she used these limitations to push the boundaries of one of the few genres open to her.

Groups like the Guerrilla Girls, a collective of women artists and art professionals, work to fight discrimination and raise awareness of the issues that women face in the art world. They do this through staging interventions and protests, wearing gorilla masks to take the focus away from their identities.
