Rumor has it that Cat Island was named after the pirate Arthur Catt, who was known to frequent the area. For more than four centuries Cat Island was known as San Salvador but in 1926 Watlings Island (also named after a pirate) was re-designated San Salvador and the moniker Cat Island was used once again.

Feral cat control is feasible on islands, but elsewhere, management is difficult due to the lack of effective and humane broad-scale control techniques, and the presence of domestic cats. Cats have been in Australia since European settlement, and may have arrived as early as the 17th century with Dutch shipwrecks.
