'Four Weddings and a Funeral' is a British film which was made on a very small budget. It made Hugh Grant, the actor who played Charles, and Kristin Scott-Thomas, who played Fiona, into stars. Today, the film is the second highest-earning British film ever, proving once again how good the British are at humour.

Teacher's notes Four Weddings and a Funeral

Charles is always late, and he is always going to weddings. But they are always other people's weddings, never his own. He has had plenty of girlfriends, but he is worried that he will never find the right woman to marry. Henrietta, one of his old girlfriends, thinks that he has a big problem with women.
